If you're a paid surveys aficionado, chances are you know all the big players in the game. Top among them is PrizeRebel. A PrizeRebel review or two will tell you that this is the site you need to visit if you want to make a few extra bucks.

But how many times have you heard of a platform that promised to help you make easy money only to scam you of your valuable time without rewarding you in any way?

Well, that's paid surveys for you. Sadly, a good number of them have no intentions of giving you any money. But surprisingly, the scam sites have glowing reviews that seduce you into signing up with the promise of fast payouts and lots of money-making opportunities.

So don't just believe any PrizeRebel review you come across. What you need is an honest PrizeRebel review that will give you details about the good, the bad, and in between. That's how you make an informed decision!

What Is PrizeRebel?

PrizeRebel is a paid survey site that allows you to make money by completing several online tasks. Each time you complete an assignment, you earn points which you can cash out via PayPal.

However, you have the option of exchanging your points for gift cards, which you can use in some of the popular retail shops such as Amazon and Walmart.

So far, so good. But when did it all start and what are PrizeRebel's numbers?

The company launched back in 2007, and according to their numbers, they have over 9 million members and over $19 million in cash rewards since they started.

We have to say that these numbers are quite impressive. When you're searching for the best survey sites, the number of years the company has been in operation is one of the signs that will tell you if it's reliable or not.

But as impressive as these numbers are, they're still not enough to help you decide whether PrizeRebel is worth it or not. So let's take a closer look.

How does it work?

You may be wondering why PrizeRebel is willing to pay you to complete simple tasks. What's in it for them?

Well, it's quite simple. The reason PrizeRebel is willing to pay you is that they also get paid by advertisers for the information they gather.

For instance, a survey may ask you to provide information about how many people reside in your house or your average income in a month. Such information may be necessary for NGOs trying to implement changes in a community or any company in need of market research.

However, although PrizeRebel gives the information you've provided to third parties, they don't disclose your details. In other words, there's no way for the third parties to trace the information back to you.

Registration on PrizeRebel is 100 percent free. Unfortunately, the surveys are only open to a few countries.

Getting started

PrizeRebel has a very straightforward signup procedure. But to make things even more effortless for you, we decided to include the process in this PrizeRebel review.

The first thing you need to do to get started on this site is to register for a new account.

You'll be required to provide your first and last name, an email address, and create a password. You also have the option of signing up with Facebook, which saves you the need to input all the details required manually.

Whichever method you choose, don't forget to confirm your email address after signing up.

Once your account is up and running, the next thing you need to do is to explore the site for available surveys and tasks you can complete to start earning points.

Generate as many points as you can and cash it out for money or gift cards. It's that simple!

Earning your first few bucks

There are several ways you can earn points on PrizeRebel. However, the backbone of the site is the paid surveys, and that's where you get the most points.

It's quite simple. All you have to do is to fill out a market research survey, earn points, and you'll see an increment in your account balance.

But when completing the survey, you need to provide honest answers. Otherwise, the survey provider will not credit the points to your account. You've got to work for it fellas!

Another thing you should know about PrizeRebel is that they use your profile information to match you with paid surveys. So you need to be honest when signing up as well.

Once they have a survey that fits your demographic, you'll see it on the board with a broad topic and an estimation of how long it will take to complete it.

It's best to take these surveys when you have enough time because rushing through them can easily lead to incorrect answers, which means fewer points for you.

Earning methods

The best thing about PrizeRebel is that they give you a variety of ways to make money on their site. Apart from the surveys that come with lots of points, here are some of the other ways you can earn extra points on PrizeRebel.

A fast and easy way to earn many points

One of the quickest ways to get good rewards on PrizeRebel is to take advantage of the paid offers available on the offer wall.

In simple terms, paid offers are activities provided by PrizeRebel's partners that you have to complete to earn rewards.

In most cases, you'll be required to sign up for something, test something, or pay for something and give it a test run and give your feedback.

For example, you can earn rewards by playing Facebook games or signing up for a free trial of a website. However, the rewards vary depending on the offer.

Nonetheless, although this seems like an excellent way to earn easy bonus points, it may be best to read the terms and conditions of each offer before signing up to understand the client's demands and expectations.

Patience pays

While gathering information for this PrizeRebel review, we also found out that you can earn points by completing tasks through a platform called Figure Eight.

To locate it, all you need to do is to click on the "earn" tab and select "tasks." You'll see several different tasks. Some of the popular jobs available on the platform include fixing broken links on websites or correcting errors, among other things.

However, you should know that you won't be able to earn a lot of points from the start. You need to work on several tasks to build trust to secure the opportunity to work on more complex tasks with higher rewards.

The effortless way to make money on PrizeRebel

Almost every PrizeRebel review raves about this option of making money, and it's not difficult to understand why.

Think about it. You get paid to watch videos and nothing else, which means you can leave the videos running and earn your points without having to sit through it. How cool is that?

But there's a catch (there always is). For you to earn real money using this method, you'll have to watch lots of videos because one only gives you very few points. Fortunately, there's no limit on the number of videos you can watch.

Test your skills

PrizeRebel also allows you to earn points by completing daily challenges. These challenges are located on the left side of your screen when you log in.

You get a specific amount of time to complete the daily challenge and earn a few extra points. So you have to work fast and earn those points before the time elapses.

Bet on your luck

If you want a quick way to earn money without doing much, you have the option of buying PrizeRebel raffles. In most cases, the prize is a $5 to $10 gift card. One ticket costs 10 cents, and you can participate in as many as you want.

To find the raffles, go to the "win" tab on the main menu, select "raffles" and purchase one. Now, pray that you're lucky stars align in your favor because this money-making method is a matter of chance.

Apart from raffles, you can also participate in the lucky numbers draw. Here, you buy a lottery ticket, pick your lucky numbers, and if you win, you get to earn points.

It doesn't get easier than this

Any PrizeRebel review will tell you that the easiest way to earn points and make money on the website is to refer a friend. By only getting your friends to signup through your referral link, you get to receive 20 percent of their points for a lifetime — now that's easy money!

Besides, you can quickly get many people to sign up by posting your referral link on social media sites like Facebook and Twitter. That way, you won't even have to do it by word of mouth. You're welcome.

Daily points

As we mentioned earlier, one of the ways to earn on PrizeRebel is by completing daily challenges to make a few extra points. However, don't just leave it at that.

Although the daily challenges have a time limit, you can still take advantage of other ways to make money on the platform.

Apart from earning points, daily activity, and points allow you to improve your PrizeRebel level to win even bigger rewards and benefits.

PrizeRebel has five levels. These include bronze (the starting point), silver, gold, platinum, and diamond. The more points you have, the higher you go on the ladder. Therefore, maximize your daily points to better your chances.

Redeeming your hard-earned cash

Now that you know all the different ways of earning money on PrizeRebel, you're probably wondering how to redeem your money after earning points.

Before we get to that, it's crucial to understand how the math works on PrizeRebel. First, you should know that 1 point is equivalent to 1 cent on the site and you need a minimum of $2 to cash out.

Once you've reached the required minimum amount, you can cash out. As we mentioned, you have two options; you can choose a direct deposit to PayPal or opt for a gift card that you can use on Amazon or Walmart.

Whichever you choose, you should know that it takes seven days for rewards to reflect in your account.

Is PrizeRebel Legit or a Scam?

Our goal is to give you the most honest and reliable PrizeRebel review. For this reason, we left no stone unturned when trying to determine if this site is legit or a scam.

First, we considered the opinion of top review sites like Frugal For Less and Paid From Surveys.

Next, we took into account customer experience based on Trustpilot user reviews. We also analyzed PrizeRebels features compared to what competitors have to offer.

Our verdict? Based on the information we gathered for this PrizeRebel review, we're happy to report that PrizeRebel is a legit site you can use to make extra cash.

One of the things that stood out for us is the fact that the company has been in operation for more than 10 years — a great indication that they're running a trustworthy site.

We also love that they give users a variety of ways to make money on the platform. Not to mention, they have a low cash out amount compared to other survey sites, which makes it even better.

The majority of users have also had a great experience on PrizeRebel, which shows the services they offer are reliable. Users rated this survey site 3.5 out of 5.0 stars on Trustpilot.

Pros and Cons

Tips for Making Money Fast

Now that you know our verdict for this PrizeRebel review, we bet you can't wait to get started and start making some extra bucks. But hold your horses. We still have some good stuff for you.

We thought it wise to include some PrizeRebel money making tips in this PrizeRebel review to help you get started on the right foot. So, let's get this show on the road.

Spread the word

It's human nature to want to hide your golden goose so that others don't rob you of your treasure. But when it comes to PrizeRebel, it pays to get more people on the platform.

Therefore, when you're just getting started, and you haven't qualified for many surveys, it would be best to take advantage of your referral link.

Send it to friends and relatives and post it on social media.

Make hay while the sun shines

It can be tempting to wait until you qualify for a survey to earn points because they offer the most points. But that would only cost you more money in the long run.

A better approach is to take advantage of every opportunity you have to make money on PrizeRebel. Sleepy? Leave a video running and catch some zs while earning points passively.

Are you bored? Pick a Facebook game and play for points. The options are limitless. Take advantage of all of them!

Play smart

If you have a hectic schedule, it's easy to miss out on surveys and daily opportunities to earn money. But there's a way to maximize your chances without having to log in to the site every minute.

The solution is to use the PrizeRebel browser add-on. With the add-on, you get to receive notifications every time there are new offers on the site.

Who Is PrizeRebel Ideal For, Is It Worth Your Time?

While it's possible to join PrizeRebel from most countries, you should know that not all countries have access to all the platform has to offer.

Most of the opportunities are available to the residents of the US, Australia, UK, and Canada.

However, there are opportunities for people living in Germany, Singapore, and France. People residing in other countries may also find ways to earn on the platform, although the opportunities will be minimal.

You have to be at least 13 years old to join PrizeRebel. However, 13 to 18-year-olds require parental approval before joining the site.

It's an excellent platform for anyone looking to make a few extra bucks. However, we wouldn't advise you to leave your day-time job for this site because it's not money you can live on.

In Summary

There you have it, an honest PrizeRebel review. This website offers you various opportunities to make money, it has a low cash out threshold, and it's easy to use. It's the true definition of a reliable site, and users attest to this fact.

We are confident that you'll be able to make a significant amount of money on PrizeRebel if you're consistent. It may not happen overnight, but everything is in your control. So signup and start earning today!
